

Websites You Should Know About

A system of keeping track of money that many people once used, but fell out of favor after being replaced by debit and credit cards, was the plain white envelope. When you got your paycheck, you cashed it and divided the money among the envelopes... one was for food, another for the house payment, another for utilities, another for gifts, another for emergencies, etc.

The envelope system lives again, but on the web. Check out this website. Learn more about your money. www.mvelopes.com

Don't pay retail. Get things for free. Sell your things to make some money. Locate a good used car to buy. Find a job. You can do all these things at Craig's List. www.craigslist.org

Debt proof living, that's the theme of this website. Hundreds of good ideas, inspiration, information and money saving tips. Subscribe to Mary Hunt's weekday email. <http://www.cheapskatemonthly.com/>

This website contains a huge variety of information about money and finances. Locate a secured credit card with good terms, check out interest rates on various kinds of loans, read interesting articles about budgeting and finance. www.bankrate.com

If you're planning to borrow money, find out for yourself what it will really cost you. Plug in the amount you plan to borrow, the interest rate and the total number of payments you'll make on the loan. You'll be amazed at the information this site will give you. <http://ray.met.fsu.edu/~bret/amortize.html>